

Constructionline and SSIP

Constructionline require as part of their registration process that a health and safety questionnaire is completed by the supplier.

It is important to note however that this is a self-certification of health and safety compliance and Constructionline do not check the validity of the information provided.

Constructionline leave any checking that may be required to the buyer to carry out.

However, if the Constructionline applicant is already registered with a SSIP health and safety competence assessment scheme, this replaces the requirement for the health and safety questions to be answered.

The difference between the Constructionline health and safety questionnaire and a third party SSIP competence certification is that the latter is assessed and validated, whereas the Constructionline questionnaire is not.

For this reason SSIP registered schemes do not recognise Constructionline as being an automatic demonstration of health and safety competence.
